Biography

Through the late 1980s and the 1990s, Michael worked as a top-notch journalist on German network television. He previously lived in Washington, DC and now resides in Berlin.

He started as a free lance reporter covering the civil war in Angola and Burma. For ten years he was a top reporter for the German network ARD, where he also served as a reporter for the national network news series ZAK. The series is also nationally renowned as the recipient of several Gremmies, the German equivalent of the American Emmys.

During his work as a reporter, he covered both international stories such as the Gulf War, the Rodney King Trial and gangs in Chicago, and local and national stories such as German right wing extremists (neo-Nazis) and the Turkish/Kurdish conflict, specialized on the conflict between the PKK and the Turkish groups in Germany..
